REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Ishii et al. US Patent No. 5,529,602 teaches a sintered alloy for used in manufacturing valve seat comprising an alloy matrix comprising a base phase being composed in weight percent of 0.5-3 Ni, 0.5-3 Mo, 5.5-7.5 Co, 0.6-1.2 C and the balance Fe and a hard phase being composed of 26-30 Mo, 7-9 Cr, 1.5 to 2.5 Si and the balance Co, and a lead phase contained in the sintered alloy in the amount of 3.5 by weight or less. See Col. 3, line 51 to col. 4, line 10. The sintered alloy is formed by mixing a lead powder having particle size approximately 10 microns or less with raw material powders for the alloy matrix, i.e. the base phase and hard phase, compacting and sintering the powder mixture in a dissociated ammonia atmosphere and cooling the sintered compact powder at control rate. See col. 7, line 15 to col. 10, line 37 and col. 11, lines 7-16.

Ishii et al and the cited prior references do not teach or render obvious the claimed method which employs in combination a) the use of the raw material powders for the matrix and the hard dispersion phase having the claimed compositions and mixing ratio, b) the use of the powders for the matrix and the hard dispersion phases having particles with average particle size of 20 to 50 microns and c) conducting solid phase sintering under vacuum condition such that Co, Cr and Si in the Co-based alloy powder diffuse and migrate into the Fe-based alloy and Fe in the Fe-based alloy diffuses and migrates concurrently into the Co-based alloy to form an Fe-based sintered
